

CHERRIES

This fruit originally from Asia Minor grows widely in all countries with a temperate climate; it requires mild climates and well-aerated, perfectly drained soil. The cordate fruit has bright light red to dark red, verging on black, colouring on its skin. The colour of the flesh is between pink and red, while the peduncle can be short or medium-long.

It has excellent organoleptic properties, with a good balance of sugars and acids.

The production of cherries in the Naturitalia system comes from suitable areas in northern and southern Italy.
